WASHINGTON.

THE AMNESTY PROCLAMATION.

The Feeling Among Conservatives and Rudicals at the National Capital.
Washington, Dec. 25, 1868.

The President's amnesty proclamation excites very little comment here, either from republicans or democrats. The latter, of course, praise it, while the extreme radicals severely condemn it. Moderate men, such as Senator Trumbull, look upon it as of little importance either way. They say it settles nothing except the mere question of the pardon of a few men engaged in the receition who were not covered by previous proclamations of a similar character. The other questions of political rights, the restoration of property, &c., must be settled by the courts so that the proclamation is regarded as relieving such men as Davis, Breckinridge and Jake Thompson from being prosecuted for treason only. The erate republicans think it can do no harm, and may do some good by taking away from the people of the South the feeting of dissatisfaction and resentment which they have felt 25 the threatened punishmen which has heretofore hung over their leaders, and, by implication, over themselves. Radicals like General Butler think the suing of the proclamation an unwarranted act of anti-ority on the part of the President. They threaten to treat it as of no effect, and some of them even go so far as to talk of a new impeachment of the President. This, how ever, finds little favor among those now here. Able lawyers like Senator Trumbull say Congress cannot do anything to set the proclamation aside, even if they were so disposed, though it is probable some such foolish attempt will be made by those more zealous than prodent.

Opinions of the Newspaper Press Upon the President's Amnesty Proclamation.

Opinions of the Newspaper Press Upon the President's Annesty Proclamation.

[From the Washington Intelligencer (administration organ), Dec. 25.]

The proclamation by the President of general and unconditional amnesty to all participating in the late rebellion—[published in the Heran.Dyesterday]—will be read with more than common interest. It is brief in its terms, and, like all the other State papers of the President, direct and perspicuous. * * * It cannot be said that the President has acted hastily or inconsiderately in this important matter. Every step has been taken advisedly, and apon a full consideration of the condition of public sentiment, and the best interests of the country, its permanent honor, welfare and safety. His first act of amnesty, issued soon after the close of the war, pardoned by one act the masses of those lately in resistance to the federal authority, but all those prominent by office, wealth or influence were omitted for further and more special consideration. Gradually, by special pardons, and by successive acts of amnesty, the number of those excluded from pardon was reduced to a comparatively few persons, until by the proclamation of the 4th of July last there were less than a hundred excluded, being those who were under indictment in the federal courts. This included Mr. Davis, General Lec, General Breckinridge and other prominent men of the confederacy; but among the list thus still shut out from the benefits of the amnesty were not a few persons who were much less conspicuous than many of those whose pardons had already been granted, with the approval of the country. In this connection we may note the fact that both the great parties of the country are in a measure committed to approve this act of general amnesty by the President. The democratic party, assembled in convention at New York, planted itself on the broad ground of "amnesty for all political offences;" and the republicans, by failing to insist in their plantorm upon the application of the penal laws on the statute boo positive acts. The proclamation of to-day will be halied as a real tangible step towards peace.

[From the Philadelphia Press (Congress organ), Dec. 25.]

President Johnson's proclamation, in which he deliberately sets himself against the fourteenth constitutional amendment, and attempts to parion the enemies of the government in the late rebeilten, is the latest of his eleventh hour expedients. There seems to be little opportunity or even disposition to punish these reckless men; but if anything could induce Congress to refuse to relieve them it is this constant effort of the President to dely the constitution and the laws and to set them free under his own proclamation. The question has been repeatedly settled that his pardoning power does not reach these cases; but he seems disposed to discard all authority, and to terminate his counsel in the Degianing of it, that "traitors should be punished and be made to take a back seat," was ulterly misincere and dishonest. Should Davis, Beauregard, Mason and others attempt to resume their rights under this proclamation a case with be made up of some interest. Congress will, no doubt, take early notice of it.

The President has issued a proclamation extending amnesty and pardon, without reservation, to all the participants in the late rebellion, and restoring, so far as executive proclamation can, all their forfeited rights and immunities. This proclamation will enable a number of distinguished exiles to reture to the land they sought to rend in twain. Further than that it will accomplish little for good or ther than that it will accomplish little for good or evil.

[From the Washington Chronicle (Congress radical), Dec. 25.]

We print elsewhere the latest proclamation of Andrew Johnson. This time he proclaims a universal amnesty, heituding in it even the chiefs of the rebellion. This much, at least, must be said for him in this connection—viz., that he shows a certain sense of poetic fitness in selecting Christmas Day for his proclamation of "peace on earth and good will to men." It will be recollected that his last amnesty proclamation also appeared to have been issued with an eye to dramatic as well as pointical effect, the day selected being the Fourth of July and the day of the assembling of the democratic nommating convention. As Davis was in a fair way to be released by the courts he will not have so very much for which to thank Mr. Johnson. In view of the latter's plebeam origin this circumstance will doubtless be pleasing to his artistocratic conceit.

President Johnson yesterday issued his expected amnesty proclamation extending pardon, anconditionally and without reservation, for the offence of treason to the United States and adhering to their enemies to all parties concerned in the late rebellion, with a restoration to all their rights, immunities and privileges under the constitution and the laws. While the pardon puts an end to the Jeff Davis case and enables Breckinridge, Sildell, Mason and others, now abroad, to return to the United States, it does not relieve either these or any other parties from the disabilities imposed by the fourteenth constitutional amendment. It simply relieves them from prosecution for treason.

Andrew Johnson, who began his Presidency by promising to hang Jeff Davis and his brother robels, has issued a proclamation giving them complete amnesty. It is of course an inconsistency, but we do not care to find fault with it. None of the robels would have been punished and none design that they should. To be pardoned by Andrew Johnson is an additional ignominy.

[From the New Haven Journal (Congress radical),

Dec. 25.]

This season of "peace, good will to men," President Johnson has seen proper to commemorate by issuing the proclamation of universal annesty, published in another column. Full pardon is now extended to all who in any way or in any capacity aided the rebellion. The leading spirits, excluded by the terms of preceding proclamations—Breckin-ridge, Jacob Thompson, Mason and Shidel—now come within its terms, and on the strength of a new lease of life may return from their forced expatriation to fill the chairs of vacant college presidencies or concect new schemes for national ruin. A ready delivery from the Jeff Davis dilemma is herein provided, and in putting an end to the trial farce the community will experience a grateful sense of relief.

[From the Baltimore Sun (independent), Dec. 25.] community will experience a grateful sense of relief.

(From the Baitimore Sun (Independent), Dec. 25.]

The President has finished up his pardons on account of the rebellion in a comprehensive and becoming amnesty proclamation, dated and issued to day. The season for this exhibition of Executive clemency and good sense is well chosen to illustrate the benign influences of peace and good will toward men.

clemency and good sense is well chosen to litustrate the benign influences of peace and good will toward men.

That the "prudential reservations and exceptions" made on past occasions "may now be visely and justly reinquished" is a conviction shured with the President by all reasonable and truly patriotic men; by all who have breadth of mind and heart sufficient to recognize in the grand act now proclaimed a deed worthy of the magnanimity of a great and powerful nation. To restore to those citizens of a country who are held to have forfeited rights and privileges as such by reason of a great struggle growing out of a conflict of opinion upon fundamental principles may well be done at a time when the issues involved in that struggle are accepted as determined, and all are anxious again to abide under the one government organization—acknowledging one country abid one flag only. In view of all the facts sot forth, the President proclaims and declares, unconditionally and without reservation, to all and every person who, directly or indirectly, participated in the fact insurrection or rebellion, a full partich and numery for the offence of treason against the United States, or adhering to their enemies during the late civil war, with restoration of all rights, pivileges and immunities under the constitution and the laws which have been made in pursuance thereof. In any the President has now put tooch ax proclamations of amnesty, and this one goes to the full measure of his constitute, unl power in the premises.

MISCELLANE. US WASHINGTON NEWS.

n ASHINGTON, Dec. 25, 1838. Attorney General in the New Cabinet.
Almost every leading public 'ournal throughout the country has had a slate Cabine,' composed and exhibited in its columns as the undolibled real thing, every position being filled except that of "Attorney General," which has been left entirely blank in most or all instances. This has not been because of its being at the foot of Cabinet appointments and the most insignificant of them; but from being in entire uncertainty as to whom the position would be likely to be bestowed upon. General Butler has been ing in the House. Butler would not be himself at all unless he had an extensive field and wide latitude scribed and systematized, his fire, force and effectivesage or con sellor, or in any routine of duties where the dry digning would have to predominate. It is altogether in a different sphere that General Butler would be of service, as on the stump, the rostrum at the bar or in the House, where the widest liberty of language and roaring eloquence with entire free-dom of movement might be exhibited with more propriety than any Cabinet position could permit.

There is every probability to suppose that the position of Attorney General will be offered to the Hon. James F. Wilson, of Iowa, now and for several years past chairman of the House Judiciary Committee. For several reasons he will likely be called into the Cabinet. Having a powerful friend at court in Speaker Colfax, with whom he has had a long intimate personal friendship, and who desires his presence and, doubtlessly, Mr. Wilson is also the choice of the people of the vast country west of the Mississippi river, who claim justly representation in

MISCELLANEOUS. . . . THE MOST EXTRAORDINARY STORY MISS M. E. BRADDON,

THE BLOSSOM AND THE BLIGHT,

is now being published in the columns of the SUNDAY MERCLEY, SUNDAY MERCLEY, the largest, the most comprehensive, the most varies and the most popular weekly newspaper on this side of the Atlantic. This exciting romance was commenced in the issue of Sunday last, and the second instainent, comprising SEVEN COLDINS of condensed type, WILL APPEAR TO-MORROW.

A resume of the opening chapters will be pre-brest to the continuation of the story into morrow's pager, as that those who were not fortunate enough to obtain a copy last Sunday will, nevertheless, be enabled to 'begin at the beginning' by glancing over the carefully propared abstract. In view of the popularity of the new serial and of the extra dismand for the first.

ever yet printed of that stendard journal. The new instalment of "THE FACTORY CIRL, or THE BLOSSOM AND THE BLIGHT," will contain one of the most turnling passages in modern fiction—of Laura Remorden from her home in Granches w, by Lascelies Temple and his associate in prodigacy, Lifet tennat Howard,

TWO FASHIONABLE BOOMS

Howard,

TWO FASHIONABLE ROUES,
holding commissions in the British Army, but more expectally to the service of the Arth Frent almself. The persectations to which the unfortunate widow is subjected, and this sawful denouement of the viptof of the confederate illustrines, are described with a vivianess and force which will leave a lasting impression unon the maginations and memories of all who read the sad and plifful story. Marton filsbel, the unscrupulous conditains and emissary of the revengeful and merciless Magdalen Lealle, figures conspicuously in this nortion of the narrative, and her infamous machinations are placed in striking contrast with the courage and devotion of the archive, and her infamous machinations are placed in striking contrast with the courage and devotion of the track of the conspirators, in the hope of reacting their vietim. The sucaking spy, Borgrave, plays the part of a slenth hound in the work of hunting down the beautiful and unoifending widow, and behind her took and instruments stands the black-hearted Magdales, feeing them liberally and directing their movements, while taking every precaution to avert suspicion from herself.

THE PUNISHMENT OF GUILT follows rapidly upon the beels of the crime committed by the licenticus Laguelles and his accomplice; Jane Marchant, TWO FASHIONABLE ROUES,

THE FUNCTION OF THE PROPERTY O

being the means of bringing them to shame and ignormly. There is a SCENE AT GRETNA GREEN which is not exceeded in deep pathos and sorrowful interest by anything that aits Bradton has ever written. Thus far wrong appears to trumph over right. The ambitious and avarichous daugners of the state of the stat sive character.

Remorae for his inhuman conduct to his daughter Laura comes too late to the breast of Squire Rupert Leslie, and he would willingly sacrifice half his fortune to recall the irreveable past. But he does not suspect his articl stater Magnelsien of having any share in the sact fate of his child. Sac keeps him in gnorance of the existence of his granddaughter Dora and deceives him by an allectation of sympathy in his ests, political and commercial journals, literary journals and the like. The SUNDAY MERCUEY, however, blends the features of all these publications in its cognitications of the features of all these publications in its cognitication and freshest information upon every subject that comes within the pravince of the newspaper grees. The result is that is circulation as verified by the transcript from the books of the internal Revenue Department, printed at the head of its editorial columns is larger than that of any weekly newspaper (properly so called) issued in this country, and its paverage cash receipts for each edition are heavier that those of any daily journal in the commercial capital. It must not be supposed, however, that the S. NDAY ME R-CURY has reached the climax of its popularity. Arrangements have been made for the coming year which will a sidmaterially to its attractiveness and usefulness. The praprietors are determined to make it absolutes.

prictors are determined to make it absolutely.
